Subject: Quendall Terminals Comment on Proposed Cleanup

Comments on Quendall

Hello, I am writing to comment on the proposed cleanup of Port Quendall along Lake Washington. As a lifelong resident of Renton, it is alarming that more has not been done to move this cleanup forward more quickly. For years, this gorgeous piece of contaminated real estate has languished while government agencies ponder possible solutions.

While scientific research to determine extent and effective cleanup methods has been completed, government agencies delay again the moving forward of the clean up and development of the property. To choose a cleanup method that will take such a long time and create a 'smoldering' nuisance along the lakeshore is insulting to city residents and surrounding communities.

Faster, less expensive, more proven methods of clean up exist and I urge the implementation of those methods. The only way this property will be cleaned up is if the development process can help to cover the costs. There have been too many delays already, with Government Agencies missing promised deadline after deadline; to now present a 10-year clean up plan is unacceptable.
